

A quick guide to Bristol's new Neighbourhood Partnerships

In October 2006 the Government published the Local Government White Paper 'Strong and Prosperous Communities' which outlined proposals to "rebalance the relationship between central government, local government and local people". The White Paper talks about giving Local Government and local people more freedom and powers to bring about the changes they want to see.

You can read more about the Local Government White Paper and download a full copy at www.communities.gov.uk

Responding to the calls for local people to have more say in local decision making, Bristol City Council is introducing new forms of Neighbourhood Governance across the city where local people can have more say in influencing decisions. The new local governance structure will be called Neighbourhood Partnerships.

This guide has been produced to explain what Neighbourhood Partnerships are, where they are happening and how you can get involved with them.

What is a Neighbourhood Partnership?

Neighbourhood Partnerships will bring together locally elected councillors, statutory agencies (like the local police, health services and schools), and local voluntary and community groups with local residents.

Where are the Neighbourhood Partnerships?

Each Neighbourhood Partnership is made up of the geographical area of two or three council wards. The map on page 3 shows which Neighbourhood

Partnerships (NP) cover which areas and who the elected councillors are in each NP, and the council officer who is providing support to each NP.

If you're not sure which council ward you live in, you can visit: www.bristol.gov.uk/wardfinder or call Bristol City Council electoral services on 0117 922 3790.

What will Neighbourhood Partnerships do?

The NP will bring together local residents, business, community and voluntary groups along with local service providers to help identify local problems and issues that need resolving and solutions to those problems.

Each partnership will decide what the priority is in their area, but there are several things that each partnership could do, such as:

- Draw up a local action plan that highlights areas or problems that need to be improved or addressed locally.
- Work with local service providers to implement the local action plan.
- Apply for funding from other sources (such as the lottery or charitable trusts) to spend on projects in the area.
- Coordinate campaigns or projects to improve local services.
- Hold events or consultations (such as surveys or questionnaires) to find out what sort of things local people would like to see improved.

Each Neighbourhood Partnership will hold regular open forum meetings in each area and an annual community conference where local people can find out what has been achieved in the past year and have an opportunity to say what the local priorities should be for the next year.

Will the Neighbourhood Partnerships make decisions or have any money to spend?

The Neighbourhood Partnerships will not have any formally devolved decision-making powers from the Council at the moment. However, the Neighbourhood Partnerships will be able to ask council staff to address issues that concern them. In the future, Neighbourhood Partnerships are expected to take on the role of making more local decisions currently made centrally by the Council.

Bristol City Council has allocated funding for the creation of Neighbourhood Partnerships in its medium term financial plan. Most of this will pay for staff to support the partnerships and the cost of holding events to get local people and groups involved. There is expected to be a small amount of money available (approximately £10,000 for each ward – each Neighbourhood Partnership will be made up of 2 or 3 wards) to spend locally on their priorities.

How will it affect my group?

If you or your group are involved in local issues then it is important to contact your local Neighbourhood Partnership to find out how you can get involved and see how you'll be able to get things done through the Partnership. Contact details for the officers supporting each Neighbourhood Partnership are on page 3.

How do I get involved with my local Neighbourhood Partnership?

It will be for the members of each Neighbourhood Partnership to decide how it wants to operate. There will be different ways to get involved, whether as a volunteer working on an issue that the Neighbourhood Partnership wants to address; attending Partnership meetings and events; or talking to other local people to encourage them to get involved as well.

The Council is providing some workers from the Community Development team to help support each Partnership (contact details on page 3). To ask any general questions about Neighbourhood Partnerships, or if you have questions about the second phase of Neighbourhood Partnerships, call Jenny Jones at Bristol City Council's Community Engagement Team on 0117 377 3561, email: jenny.jones@bristol.gov.uk

Where can I find out more about local groups in my area?

Your Neighbourhood Partnership will be able to put you in touch with voluntary and community groups in your area. You can also find lists of voluntary and community groups on Bristol City Council website at:

www.bristol.gov.uk/communitygroups or on the Voscur website www.voscur.org/directories

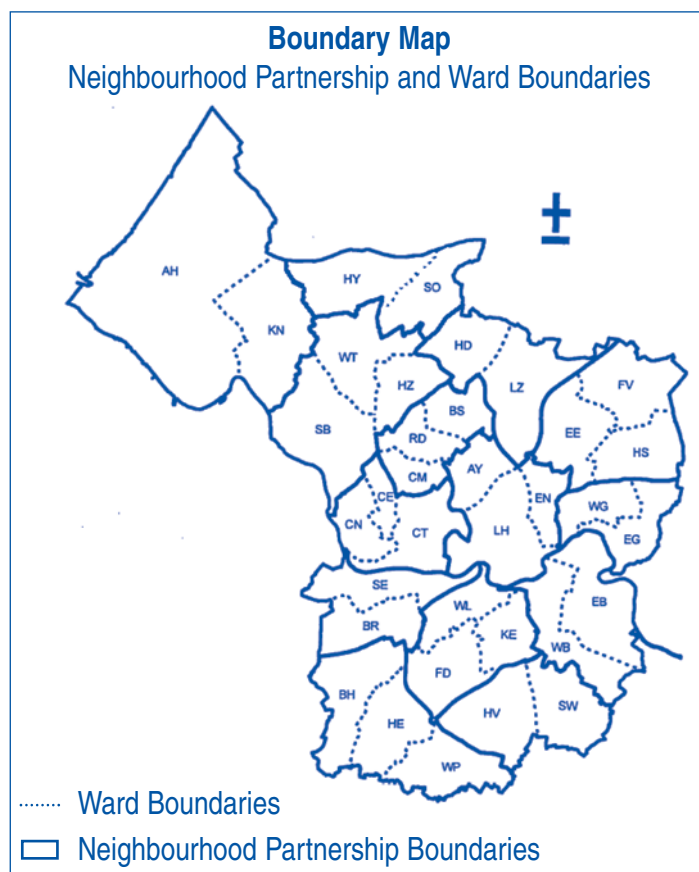

What role will local ward councillors play in Neighbourhood Partnerships?

As democratically elected representatives for an area, local councillors have a very important role to play in the new Neighbourhood Partnerships (NP). The NP will help local people to discuss with their councillors, issues of local concern. New powers for councillors proposed in the Local Government White Paper such as 'Community Call for Action' will give them new powers to demand a response to an issue of local concern and help them to work with their NP to get local concerns addressed.
